ILHAMAD: The National Electric Power Regulatory Authority (NEPRA) on Friday raised the rates of energy for commercial and agricultural sectors by Rs1.96 per unit and Rs0.96 additional energy respectively.

Faisalabad: NEPRA approved an increase of Rs1.65 per unit for commercial (Rs1.96) and Rs0.96 additional energy for agricultural customers.

The increase in rates was necessitated due to loss of revenue from the CPEC and O3C power projects.

The country’s energy sector has a deficit of about 6,650 MW, which is 5% of the total installed capacity. The shortage of power is due to the high demand for electricity, which is expected to increase due to the warm weather in the upcoming months. The government is working on increasing the capacity of power plants and improving the transmission and distribution networks to meet the demand.

The NEPRA’s move is expected to affect the industrial sector, which relies heavily on electricity for its operations. The industrial sector is estimated to consume around 30% of the total electricity generated in the country. The increased rates are likely to increase the cost of production for the industrial sector, which may result in higher prices for goods and services.

The government is also working on developing renewable energy sources to reduce the country’s dependence on fossil fuels. The government has set a target of generating 30% of its electricity from renewable sources by 2030. The NEPRA’s move is expected to provide a boost to the renewable energy sector, which is expected to attract increased investment.

In conclusion, the NEPRA’s increase in energy rates is necessary to meet the demand for electricity and improve the efficiency of the country’s energy sector. However, the increased rates are likely to have an impact on the industrial sector and the cost of goods and services.

Playing with Fire in Punjab

One can only hope that the PTI understands that it has now pushed matters so far in Punjab that what first appeared to be a ridiculous circus is now turning into a very dangerous game where it is practically playing with fire. Disregarding judicial rulings is dangerous enough, especially when you drag it to the point of threatening to file a judicial reference against the judge that called you out for making a mockery of the constitution. But when you appeal to the army to intervene when you’re clearly disagreeing with a court decision, you’re pushing the military to override the judiciary, which completely changes the complexion of the whole narrative.

In this way, PTI is itself guilty of strengthening that which it was looking to provoke the military into stepping in since its dying days in power – just so it can play the proper martyr even if it means throwing the entire country into utter chaos. And, for all intents and purposes, Punjab Governor Cheema, and even President Alvi for that matter, are just carrying out their master’s orders in sheer disregard of the constitutionally mandated neutrality of their offices.

This is exactly the kind of thing they used to attack other parties for in years gone by; though nobody trampled on the constitution quite like this in those days.

That the country’s politics need a dose of sanity is obvious. It’s true that a lot of people don’t like what they see when a father-son duo with considerable political and legal baggage gets ready to preside over cabinets of politically opportunistic electables, most of whom are suspected of serious corruption. But the way PTI’s been making its case, especially after throwing a fit and even fiddling with the constitution just because it was de-scathed through a perfectly legal process, is also quite shameful.

It’s best if all parties take the time until the election to regroup and revisit their strategies, and leave the public space free of any more unwarranted unpleasantness. With the reputation of serious state institutions also being damaged on the streets and sidewalks, the situation is quite ready to explode as it is.

Dangerous speech

J ust before he climbed a deal to say Twitter for a few minutes, Mayor of Karachi Sadiq Khan, that he might jettison the platform’s limits on speech by tweeting "hateful content" if someone you don’t like allowed to say something you don’t like. “Do you say it?” he asked. "You don’t say it! You’re annoying, but that is in the sign of a healthy, functioning free-speech situation.”

Musk didn’t specify which kinds of speech he means, but he gave no more than two weeks later by re-rejecting far-right critiques of two of Twitter’s executives. One discussed clips of Vijaya Gadde, the company’s general counsel and chief legal officer, which he also pointed out that she was besieged on various social media.

Some of Musk’s more than 84 million Twitter followers followed him live on the platform. Many of the hostile posts referred to her Indian back- ground and her professional achievements, which the far-right conspiracy theorist Mike Cernovich then tweeted without mention of facilitating fraud.

The choice of words seemed too smug to be her posts; others were even more than "dumb annoying," Dick Costolo, who was the CEO when Musk joined Twitter in 2016, once said, "What’s going on? You’re making an execu- tive at the company you just bought the target of harassment and threats.”

In another news, Musk is considering to say-what-you-like era. About a decade ago, Costolo began referring to relatively new employees in his "party-speak,” denying that Twitter wanted to be people as they post, and the company avoided removing tweets or accounts.

In the subsequent events, Twitter backed away from that hands-off position, as users at protest against uncharacteristic actions on the platform. Amidst the same, Robin Williams’ 23-year-old daughter Zelda received graphic, horrifying tweets blaming her for his suicide in 2014. During that period, Twitter staff began reviewing the platform’s rules to prohibit ‘targeted harassment’ and further social media.

It was under the latter that former President Donald Trump was finally removed from the platform, after his April 21, 2021, ran on the Capitol. Politics of false narratives

Iftaam Khan looks the credentials of a visionary leader who has an unwavering commitment to the principles of justice and the promotion of peace. But he is rarely in a position to speak out against the policies of his government which has been committed to maintain peace at any cost. Khan has been silent on the issue of the detention of journalist Hamza Shahbaz in Chakwal. According to the Constitution of Pakistan, the detention of journalist without due process violates the fundamental rights of every citizen. How can anyone claim to have a vision for Pakistan, when they are not willing to stand up for the basic rights of the people? The silence of Khan on this issue is indicative of his failure to take a principled stand on behalf of the people. The government should be held accountable for the detention of journalist Hamza Shahbaz. Khan should use his influence to ensure that the journalist is released immediately.

What will the new energy policy be?

PML-N led coalition government recently established an important committee to look into the energy sector and is going to present its findings to the country. The new government under the leadership of PML-N has already undertaken a number of initiatives to improve the energy sector, including the establishment of the Pakistan Petroleum Corporation, the merger of Pakistan Oilfields and the creation of the Pakistan National Energy Corporation. These initiatives have been well-receieved by the country and are expected to bring about positive changes in the energy sector.

Tightening fuel supplies and curbing electricity theft are also new elements in Pakistan’s energy policy. The government has taken measures to ensure that the supply of fuels is adequate and that the prices are fair. The country is facing a shortage of fuel and the government has taken steps to address this issue. The government also plans to increase the use of renewable energy sources in order to reduce its dependence on imported fuels.

Geo-economic war

The ongoing geo-economic conflict in the region is a reflection of the West’s complicated one, surrounded by nearly 130 countries and a plethora of misinformation as the war is being fought. The escalating tensions between both parties are clearly evident on the ground. But looking at the evident facts, it seems like the world is becoming clear that the Kremlin would effectively be in default by ignoring its own decisions. By April 29, Russia’s finance minister announced that the country will no longer accept dollars or euros. By May 10, the US Treasury Department imposed sanctions on the Russian central bank account. By May 24, the US Treasury Department announced that it will no longer accept Russian central bank account payments. By May 25, the US Treasury Department announced that it will no longer accept Russian central bank account payments. By May 31, the US Treasury Department announced that it will no longer accept Russian central bank account payments.

In response, Russian officials accused the US of attempting to impose “economic sanctions” on Ukraine, which is a default by ignoring its own decisions. TV shows that people don't recognize Eva B's face, but her voice, she is one of the top rappers in Pakistan, her song "I'm not a hero" is becoming a viral sensation.

Inspired by rappers from the United States, Eminem and Queen Latifah, she decided to start a music career and is now spreading her music to Facebook, where she built a following.

Affraid of angering her family, she would upload music videos to formal full tracks with the help of other emerging artists in her neighborhood.

But when news reached her brother, she received a backlash from her family who considered the genre inferior for a young girl and who feared she would go to an early and deeply conservative marriage.

Latter they realized that she was persistent, so they summoned. They realized I wouldn't stop singing, she begged, adding that her mother now supports her and she is on her way.

Eva B is due this year to accelerate her music career in Pakistan, it is likely that she will be a part of the most popular television programs in Pakistan — in fact, she can be the next star of the 2022 series.

The music video for "Khuul" (#singer), features a middle-aged Tariq Sharif about the betrayal of a love story, has more than 10 million views on YouTube.

But unlike other artists in the series, she has gained celebrity status.

Music videos that I made in the past, people have seen them but they have not really know me, she said.

She finds it interesting to deal in music videos on social media, and she is always been a part of a music video to be seen in a series. "These videos are like special versions of the music videos that I put out on my channel. I am always putting up new versions of my songs and I am very interested in creating a music video for a song that I have released before."

Then she won another award for "Making of the Year" for "Khuul".

She says people think music videos are easy, but they are not. "I have always been a part of the music video of "Khuul". I am always putting up new versions of my songs and I am very interested in creating a music video for a song that I have released before."
